) OF LAW RESPONDING TO THIS
) COURT'S FEBRUARY 3, 2006
) ORDER FOR ADDITIONAL ) BRIEFING

) DATE: February 24, 2006
) TIME: 9:00 A.M.
) CTRM: Hon. James Ware

Pursuant to this Court's February 3, 2006 Order Requiring Additional Briefing, Plaintiff Acacia Media Technologies Corporation ("Acacia") addresses each of this Court's three issues:

- 1. Whether the Court should regard the pending motion as one in which Acacia is moving for partial summary judgment against Acacia and in favor of all Defendants on all claims of infringement of the '702 patent on the following ground: Based on the Court's December 7, 2005 Order, the affirmative defense of invalidity is sustained as a matter of law.

Yes, the Court should regard the pending motion as one in which Acacia is moving for partial summary judgment against Acacia and in favor of all Defendants on all claims of infringement of the '702 patent on the following ground: Based on the Court's December 7, 2005 Order, the affirmative defense of invalidity is sustained as a matter of law.

In its December 7, 2005 Order, the Court found:

1. that the claim term "sequence encoder," which appears in independent claims 1 and 17 and in dependent claims 18 and 32, of U.S. Patent No. 6,144,702 ("the '702 patent"), is indefinite;¹ and
2. that the claim term "identification encoder," which appears in independent claims 1, 17, and 27 and in dependent claims 5, 6, 19, and 31 of the '702 patent, is indefinite.

The Court's finding that the term "sequence encoder" in claims 1, 17, 18, and 32 is indefinite and finding that the term "identification encoder" in claims 1, 17, and

¹ The Court did not find the term "sequence encoder" in claims 7 and 33 of the '702 patent to be indefinite and Acacia contends that the term "sequence encoder" in claims 7 and 33 of the '702 patent is definite. Acacia, however, cannot contend that dependent claims 7 and 33 are valid in view of the Court's finding of indefiniteness of the term "identification encoder," which is also present in claims 7 and 33 of the '702 patent.

1 27 is indefinite renders all of the claims of the ‘702 patent (claims 1-42) indefinite,
2 and therefore invalid, under 35 U.S.C. § 112, ¶ 2.

3 2. Whether the Court should regard the pending motion as one in 4 which Acacia is moving for partial summary judgment against 5 Acacia and in favor of all Defendants on all claims of 6 infringement of the ‘702 patent on the ground that the accused
7 products of the Defendants do not infringe the ‘702 patent.

8 Yes, the Court should regard the pending motion as one in which Acacia is 9 moving for partial summary judgment against Acacia and in favor of all Defendants
10 on all claims of infringement of the ‘702 patent on the ground that the accused
11 products of the Defendants do not infringe the ‘702 patent.

12 In its December 7, 2005 Order, the Court found that the claim phrase
13 “transmission system at a first location,” which appears in independent claims 1, 17,
14 and 27 of the ‘702 patent, means “a transmission system at one particular location
15 separate from the location of the reception system.”

16 The effect of the Court’s construction of the phrase “transmission system at a 17 first location” in claims 1, 17, and 27 of the ‘702 patent is to render all of the claims
18 of the ‘702 patent (claims 1-42) not infringed by the transmission systems made, used,
19 or sold by the defendants in this case which are located at more than one location.
20 Acacia is aware that defendants utilize transmission systems located at more than one 21 location separate from the location of the reception system. In order to expedite its 22 appeal, Acacia concedes non-infringement of the ‘702 patent based on this Court’s
23 construction of “transmission system at a first location.”²

24
25
26 ² Acacia has not, however, conceded that none of the defendants have a transmission
27 system at only one location separate from the location of the reception system.
28 Acacia has not been able to take any discovery from defendants and therefore has no basis for conceding or contending, and does not concede or contend, that defendants have no transmission systems that are located at more than one location separate from the location of the reception system.

1 3. Whether any of the issues involved in the ‘702 patent are
2 present in any of the other patents involved in the MDL case
3 such that the appellate court will not be required to decide the 4 same issues more than once if there are subsequent appeals.

5 No, none of the issues involved in the ‘702 patent are present in any of the 6 other patents involved in the MDL case. If the Court enters judgment pursuant to 7 Rule 54(b), the appellate court will not be required to decide the same issues more
8 than once if there are subsequent appeals.

9 Acacia’s appeal of the ‘702 patent will involve only three indefiniteness and 10 claim construction issues:

- 11 1. Whether the claim term “sequence encoder” is indefinite, and, if not, 12 what is the proper legal construction for this claim term?
- 13 2. Whether the claim term “identification encoder” is indefinite, and, if 14 not, what is the proper legal construction for this claim term?
- 15 3. What is the proper legal construction of the claim phrase
16 “transmission system at a first location?”

17 If the Court were to grant a Rule 54(b) judgment, the Federal Circuit will not be 18 asked, in a subsequent appeal of another Yurt patent, to decide the purely legal 19 question of the indefiniteness or the proper legal construction of the claim terms 20 “sequence encoder,” “identification encoder,” or “transmission system at a first 21 location,” as these terms do not appear in any other Yurt patent
